THE SENIORS

Our High School days are over now; We've gained our goal at last: And now we are rewarded well For the labors of the past.	Though more than once we might have asked, "Why do we have to work?" Yet duty always conquered us, And our tasks we did not shirk.

Altho' at times we have despaired And felt downcast and blue, We've stuck it out right to the end To show what we could do.	Each year was marked with joys and pains, Battles won and battles lost; Each conquest new gave us new joy; When we failed, we paid the cost.
--	--

We bid farewell to all of you,
And hope, in the years to come,
That all of you may be like us,
Rejoicing in work well done.

FOUR YEARS OF HIGH SCHOOL

Rhineland High School was once a happy place
When members of the class of twenty-six
Were present in its wide and spacious halls.
Four wondrous years of study, sport, and play
We made swift progress toward our goal, in spite
While we were there. At first as Freshmen green,
Of all the sneers and frowns and laughs and tricks
That came from upper classmen every day.
Our Sophomore year was even more renowned.
We won the friendship of the Seniors great,
And, too, the hatred of the Juniors bold.
Then came our Junior year, when we surpassed
In everything we did, all that was done
By any class before. And then to end
This strange, eventful, pleasing history,
We come again into the halls at last,
As Seniors, great, and better than the best.
'Tis then we reach the height of all the world.
And so through school passes the brightest class,
Whose great achievements none can reproduce
Except in dreams, which never will come true.
